

Getting out and about

► We need to prepare for an ageing population.

As our population ages, we will need to be able to get around safely regardless of where we live. Mobility is vital to well-being and to maintain connections in the community.

82% of all New Zealanders' household travel is by car

— Around 5% travel time is spent on public transport

As more people remain at work, or choose to live in their home past 65, we'll see greater demand for safe and accessible transport options.

▶ Will you drive after 65? Will your use of public transport change as you get older?

Have your say

Between 29 June and 24 August we're asking New Zealanders of all ages what they want for the future. Have your say. Find out about community workshops near you – or set up one of your own.
